

IN THE WAKE OF THE STORM

Damage Done by Big Cloudburst.

Debris Covers Lawns and Streets and Chokes Cellars.

Some of the Experiences Which Citizens of Salt Lake Encountered.

ONCE upon a time, in the dark, dark ages, there was a prosperous brickyard on the northeast bench. Probably this important fact in the history of Salt Lake's commercial growth and history would have been allowed to sink into oblivion had it not been for the storm on Friday evening. This brick yard stood on the ground a little north of west of what is now "Lingerlonger," the Powers home in Popperston. The ground was in the path of the cloudburst, and when the wall of water came down from Dry canyon, it thought it would be a merry caprice to dig up the remains of this former lively adjunct to local manufacturing plants.

It dug up relics of the past in a great manner. The east end of Third street and the intersecting streets show plentiful evidence of the work of an hour as old bricks of a bygone pattern are scattered all over the place, and what was formerly a well-kept roadway or a green lawn, now looks like a pathway leading to a brick kiln.

Near-by Lawns Were Covered. All the lawns in the vicinity were completely covered and householders were busily engaged yesterday in shoveling up the debris, which was carted away for future reference. One little house, a block west and south of the old brickyard, was completely surrounded by the yellowish mud, which extended far into the street in all directions.

The home of Judge Powers and others in Popperston did not receive any great damage owing to the height upon which they are built, but the water managed to get into the cellars and did considerable damage to the drives in that neighborhood. In the case of the only work of yesterday was that of clearing off the lawns, and this was accomplished in most cases, with an ordinary garden hose, the owner using the hose to wash off the soft soil that had been deposited upon the green grass. The lawns after the bath looking as fresh as ever.

Some old-time houses on upper Third street were completely surrounded by the water and vacant lots bear evidence of the deluge. In the down-trodden weeds and numberless bricks that cover the place, and one cannot get away from the bricks.

Extent of the Cloudburst. While the heaviest cloudburst, was reported from the northeast section, in Dry canyon, it is evident, from a tour of the city, that the same condition, or nearly as great a rush of water, prevailed in those portions of the city watered by the east canyons from Dry to Mill creek. This is proved by the fact that wherever there is a well-defined water course, the rush of water was the greatest. While certain parts of the city were only treated to a small shower, the portions mentioned had a regular terror and the dry as well as the running streams were swollen beyond precedent.

First came the water from Dry canyon. Then the region about Fort Douglas was similarly treated and the waters of Red Butte became a veritable river. Parley's canyon, the Cottonwoods and other details showed up just as well. The storm came from the south and swept along the east mountains, culminating in the section lying between Dry and City Creek canyons.

Climate Changing. "The climate is changing," said more than one old-timer yesterday. In the past Salt Lake has been visited with periodical storms, but none so pronounced as the one of Friday night. In July, 1894, there was a heavy fall of snow, but it was merely the curiosity that caused it to be remarked. There have been many small rains in the summer, but nothing like the late one. Mantl has been the center of the summer storm king and that town has been very nearly wiped out, time and again, although its people have now protected themselves from any damage from this source.

As far as can be learned, this was the first time such a cloudburst has struck Salt Lake and it will go down into history as the big storm of 1904.

To show how far reaching was the effect of the rushing waters it can be stated that the mud was carried along Brigham street almost to the home of Senator Kearns. During the height of the storm the water was six inches deep in front of the McMillan home, and the residences of Mr. MacVie and Mr. Pearson were completely surrounded. Their lawns were covered with mud and water and the cellars of all the low-lying houses on the south side of Brigham between Tenth and Seventh East were filled. The grounds of the Holy Cross hospital were like a pond.

Side Streets Raging Torrents. The water rushed down the side streets with great force. Judge Goodwin lives on U street. He it not been that the west side of the road has a deep furrow, the water would have invaded all the houses thereabouts. As it was, the water went by a foot deep and with lightning speed. This was so with all the side streets high up on the bench.

All this water found its way to Brigham street and thence followed the roadway or tracks to a resting place. The street, for several blocks, is denuded of earth and looks like new washed gravel, while lower down the

TO DEMONSTRATE DRY FARMING WORK

Excursions Will Run to the Several Experiment Stations in Utah.

IN THE excursions planned for the coming week to the various stations by Prof. John A. Whitsoe, director of the experimental dry farms in Utah, a fine opportunity will be offered to the farmers of studying means and results.

Prof. Whitsoe has issued a circular letter in which he explains his plan. This says that the crops on the dry farms are now approaching maturity. It is desired to give the farmers of the localities in which these farms are situated an understanding of the work that has been done in the matter of growing crops without irrigation. The excursions arranged for this purpose follow:

Juni county farm, four miles south of Nephi, Thursday, July 7; demonstrator, Dr. John A. Whitsoe.

Tooele county farm, twelve miles west of Tooele and seven miles south of Granville, Friday, July 8; demonstrator, Prof. Lewis A. Merrill.

Iron county farm, four miles west of Parowan, Saturday, July 9; demonstrator, Prof. William Jardine.

Those interested are urged to meet at the different farms promptly at 11 o'clock on the days appointed. The demonstrator will be on hand to explain the work and to conduct the party over the plots and explain the work. It is suggested that the excursionists bring their lunch with them. Ice water and lemonade will be provided. All are invited, the women as well as the men.

AFTER WEDDING GOES TO JAIL

Williams's Honeymoon in Prison Cell.

He Is Arrested for Robbing a Rooming-House of $20 and Two Razors.

His Bride of Three Days Is Confident of His Innocence of the Crime.

MARRIED on Wednesday, charged with burglary on Friday and arrested on Saturday, such is the romantic career of Harry Williams. Last Wednesday night Williams and his wife were the central figures at pretty little home reception which was given in their honor, now Williams is in the city jail while Mrs. Williams is home alone, a dependent wife of only three days' married life.

Last Friday night a rooming-house conducted by Mrs. Crommel of 158 North West Temple was entered by burglars and from one of the rooms two razors and a $20 gold piece were taken. Suspicion immediately fell upon Harry Williams, who has been employed of late by Mrs. Crommel while she has been house-cleaning. Yesterday morning the two missing razors were found at Clum's pawn shop and the clerk later identified Harry Williams as the person from whom he had purchased the goods for the trivial sum of 50 cents.

Explanation Not Satisfactory. Williams failed to make a satisfactory explanation and was taken to headquarters by Sergeant Hempel. He failed to furnish the required bail and is now in jail where he will remain until Monday afternoon when he will be called in to court to answer to a charge of petit larceny.

His Wife's Statement. When seen last evening Mrs. Williams, nee Brown, reluctantly gave out the following interview: "I cannot believe that my husband is guilty and shall consider him absolutely innocent of the charge until he is given a fair trial and proved guilty. I have known and been associated with Harry for more than a year and I know that his record is above question for that time at least. Occasionally girl friends of mine told me little tales about him, but on investigation they proved groundless, just as the present charge will. He is not guilty, I know he is not guilty," exclaimed the bride with fire flashing through her tear bedimmed eyes.

No Reason to Commit Crime. "He had no reason for committing the act. He had some money despite the fact that he has not been able to find much work in his line of late. You know Harry is a machinist and he has preferred to remain in Salt Lake working at various odd jobs until the new shops open, in preference to going to other cities to seek employment in his line. But then if he didn't have money, why he knew that papa did and he thought he would get some money. I suppose you think that he was forced to this act through a desire to provide me with necessary wants of life. Well, he wasn't, and you might just as well drop that leave my Harry alone." To the question, what then did impel him to adopt this course, she replied: "Ah! Ah! why that's just the point. He didn't have any cause for doing it and I know that Harry has got sense enough to refrain from doing a thing like this when there was no necessity for it. Harry charged with stealing two razors and selling them for 50 cents! Now just think of it! Does that sound reasonable to you?" she said as a smile of triumph spread over her dejected countenance.

Sure He Is Innocent. "Well—he won't be proved guilty so what's the use of talking about that. My love and confidence in him are unshaken and I shall stand up for him until the bitter end. He has always backed me. Wouldn't I be a coward if I were to go back on him now? If I don't stand by him, who will? Would you expect me to leave my Harry alone? I love him as much now as I did on last Wednesday night and I suppose I will continue to in the future."

At this juncture her face suddenly brightened and she half jokingly, she remarked: "Well, here I am confessing my whole heart to you. I think I had better quit. Maybe Harry will read this and you know women don't always like their husbands to know just how they feel. You see there is a certain pleasure that comes from keeping your husband sort of guessing. I have lots of fun bluffing Harry, and so before I tell you all my secrets I am going to quit."

Portland's Coming Fair. While the people of the East are talking of nothing but St. Louis, the folks of the Northwest are enthusiastic about the Lewis and Clark exposition in Portland, James Murphy, who is a traveling man here in the city, has the honor of being a committee member for St. Louis to study the best features there, and then Portland will eclipse it.

ALMA WRIGHT IS ILL IN NEW YORK

Reports Received in Salt Lake City Say the Artist Will Recover.

Word has been received of the serious illness in New York of Alma Wright, a well-known Utah artist. Later in the day a telegram reached his family announcing that he would recover. Two years ago Mr. Wright went to Paris to study art, returning to New York recently.

Before leaving Utah he was an instructor in the Brigham Young academy at Logan. One of his pictures was selected while he was in Paris for the St. Louis fair.

ENGINEER TANNER ON DUCHESNE BASIN

Tells of Ample Flow of Water for Irrigation Purposes From Three Streams.

ENGINEER C. TANNER of the government reclamation service, who has been in charge of the work of establishing gauging stations on the stream of the Duchesne river basin, has just returned from his second trip this spring to the scene of his special work and reports his findings even more encouraging for Utah's great irrigation project than on the occasion of his former visit.

"The principal three streams of the Duchesne basin—Rock Creek, Lake Fork and North Fork—are magnificent streams," said Mr. Tanner yesterday. "While they were not at their highest when I was there, Rock Creek and Lake Fork were discharging about 100 second feet of water each, either being equal in flow to the Provo river, while North Fork's discharge was about 600 second-feet. The indications are that the flow of the three streams will average 2,400 second-feet for the entire flood season of 100 days. I did not expect to find the discharge of the largest stream in the basin to exceed 600 to 700 second-feet."

"There is still a great deal of snow at the head of these streams, and as the drainage basin is non-saltatorial in character even the flood waters are absolutely clear. Owing to the absence of soil where the snow lies the streams fall quite suddenly to low water mark after the snows have melted, which is usually about the middle of July. This feature of the country makes the reservoir system the only practicable one for an irrigation project on that side of the range, for without storage there would be a scarcity of water in August when it is needed in large quantities."

ESSENTIALS TO SUCCESS.
Conservative Investment Is One of Them.

Two things, experience has shown, are essential to a man's financial success. One is that he determine early in life to lay aside a certain portion of his income, and the other is that the sum so accumulated be placed in a safe investment, which will receive him a steady profit from the transaction. People are prone to live up to the full amount of their income or salary and generally delay investing their capital after they have acquired it through the saving habit. That is a poor system to follow, if they ever expect to become rich. McGurkin & Co., the investment bankers, will handle their money for them and make an absolute guarantee of a return of 6 percent on whatever sum they invest, and also guarantee the security. This opportunity, combining safety with a high rate of interest, is a splendid one, and is within the reach of every one who is earning a salary or has an income and wishes to have a portion of it to work for him. The investor may hold the securities himself, and will have no bookkeeping or other details pertaining to a loaning transaction to contend with. Small sums receive the same conservative and careful attention as would investments amounting to thousands of dollars.

Cambrian Day at Saltair. Another big day at Saltair this season will be Wednesday, July 13, the occasion being the annual excursion of Cambrians from all parts of the State. As is customary, the main features of the outing will be the carrying out of a musical program of Welsh songs and airs, interspersed with other features peculiar to the people of Wales. Among the artists who are expected to take part are Lizzie Thomas Edwards, Millie Williams, Charles Kent, H. E. Giles, Will Phillips, David Jeremy and Joseph Parry.

HAPPY MANHOOD
Happy, glorious Manhood—the strength that pushes the world! Success in its completeness! And what is weakness? Failure, despair! But why be weak, when a cure is within your reach for the asking? All men with very few exceptions were made strong and should be so through life. Many have abused this grand privilege and through dissipation have become weaklings, puny, lack confidence, can't face the slightest difficulty, have drains, losses, impotency, varicocele, rheumatism, lame back, etc., and are mere playthings in the hands of their associates. How deplorable, but all these men can be made full of strength, vigor and life if they will only turn to the right source. Electricity cures these cases. I have been curing thousands every year for nearly forty years. So positive am I of what my world-famed Dr. Sander Electric Belt will do that if you call or send for one you can use it

FREE UNTIL CURED
Not a penny on deposit or in advance. I will take your word for results, and only charge price of belt—many cases low as $4.
My wonderful success has brought forth many imitations of my belt, but my valuable experience to advise and guide my patients cannot be imitated. It and my belt can be had free until a cure is effected, but only at address as below.
All and get one today, or write. I also send two best books ever written upon health and strength of men. Free, sealed, by mail.
